When the famous nun, Mother Cabrini, arrived in America in 1900 to work among the downtrodden Italian immigrants, she was penniless. A countess came to her help and offered her a large house to be used as a convent and home for homeless children. Archbishop Corrigan of New York City did not believe in the whole idea, even though the countess had also given thousands of dollars to support it. "So what?" he skeptically asked. "How long do you think that money will last? Within a year it will all be gone and then what?" But the countess answered, "Your Grace, when we pray, we ask for our daily bread, not bread for a year."

Jesus towards the end of today's Gospel said: "I am the bread of life; whoever comes to me will never hunger and whoever believes in me will never thirst." When we say "bread" we can mean sustenance, like when we say "put bread on the table and we have in mind food in general. Food is not simply functional. It is, of course, essential for life. We cannot live and we die if we do not eat. It can also give great pleasure. It can satisfy our hunger and sustain us in our daily undertaking. More than this, eating is a very sociable activity. Many people, when they are celebrating a very important event like an anniversary, baptism, wedding or another life event or when they simply want to meet up together, go out for a meal or prepare a meal for those celebrating. We entertain our visitors by giving them some food to eat. The finest food does not taste good if it is eaten alone.

So food is much more than something functional which we take merely to keep us alive. It's also something which binds us together, something we share as human beings, something which can give enormous pleasure and which tells us we belong. When I say "bread," philosophically, it means food of the mind, profound thinking, intellectual stimulation, the appeal to knowledge and the rational support for the laws that govern social existence together in towns, in nations and in households. An example of this food for the mind could be education but it is not the "bread of life" as Jesus understands it. This bread of life, unlike the other bread that does not give life, is not the bread that makes us smart, superior to others, gives us the edge, the advantage over others in a competitive world, that makes you rich and famous, but it is a bread that gives us peace, deliverance from restless hunger, concern and love for the poor and gives us eternal life. This bread is none other than Jesus Christ.

It is a fact that every time we eat food we do something which no scientist has ever been able to do: we take into ourselves something dead and we give it life. Food becomes part of our body. Many times our health depends on food. There is an old proverb that says: "You are what you eat." Eat rich food and you get fat; eat junk food and you become malnourished. Whenever we have a big job to do, we get ready by eating good food. Knowing all this, Jesus decided to hide inside of bread with all his power and become the food of the souls of his followers. It is in the Eucharist God gives us food which is a gesture of His love. Jesus Christ as our Eucharistic food nourishes and strengthens us. Not by making us less human, but by making us more courageous. Not by eliminating temptation but by making us stronger to say "No" to stealing, to lie, to drink and to sin. Not by making life soft but by giving us the courage to fight hard. Not by giving us a different nature but by elevating the nature which we have.

Respectfully submitted by Deacon Tim

Stewardship Prayer

Generous God, I give thanks to you for the gifts you have given me – my life, my family, my friends – time, talents and material possessions. All that I have comes from you.

Help me to remember this and rejoice in your goodness. Walk with me, my God. Help me on my spiritual journey, so that I may constantly renew my relationship with you and all the people in our parish.

Renew in me your spirit, give me the strength and courage to become a better follower of Jesus, to be a disciple.

Help me to hear the call, “Come, follow Me.” I give glory to you, my God, as I make stewardship a way of life.

is a program instituted by the Church after the Second Vatican Council.
